TEA CEREMONY
茶道

You can find tea and whisky drinks in China. We challenged Tea Sommelier, Sebastian Filgueiras, appointed by the Companhia Portuguesa do Chá, and our Head Bartender, Vasco Martins, to select the best tea and whisky blends, enhancing their main aromatic notes.

The result is amazing.

Whisky must be served without ice and/or water and tea must be served in a Gaiwan teacup.

JIN XUAN OOLONG THAI TEA
(THAILAND)

- Tasting Notes -

This 'jade' oolong tea has been produced in northern Thailand for over forty years, in a former opium plantation region, which became a camellia plantation from Taiwan in the 80s. The floral notes have an exceptional quality. Velvety and enduring, the tea prepares your palate for an 'explosion' of flavours and notes in this single malt, such as papaya, vanilla, rainforest flowers. The bouquet is enhanced by the amazing experience of adding Kavalan premium.

ICHIRO'S MALT DOUBLE
DISTILLERIES (JAPAN)
&
MILKY OOLONG (CHINA)

- Tasting Notes -

Associating an exceptional Japanese whisky with a sublime Chinese tea is a challenge. One of the rarest tea of the world, entirely produced by hand in the Fujian province with a very careful drying process over steamed buttermilk, which gives it a "butterscotch" note. It blends incredibly with biscuit and green fruit notes, composing the Ichiro's flavour. A velvety and silky ending, with spicy notes.

NIKKA FROM THE BARREL
(JAPAN)
&

LAPSANG AZORES (PORTUGAL)

- Tasting Notes -

Nikka is a blended whisky. Hence, we selected an exclusive blend from the Azores. It is a smoked, oven-dried tea, which is incredibly mysterious and full-bodied, with tobacco, rainforest and pinewood notes. This tea from the Azores is an exceptional blend that reminds us of the ocean freshness, releasing strong and intense aromas, associated with the Nikka wood. An unexpected "match" that transports you to the East from Portugal.
